Recording Your Lectures for Fun and (Possible) Profit

Andrew Rosen
Temple University
andrew.rosen@temple.edu

ABSTRACT

You should record your lectures. It's super easy and fun

1 INTRODUCTION

This paper is intended for an audience

2 WHY

- Ease of review
- Note taking ease
- Illness (see 2019 measles and mumps outbreaks and recent births)
- Use for future

2.1 Effects on Attendance

3 ENTERPRISE OPTIONS

I've listed this first because this is probably the most straightforward option.

Your institution may have

3.1 Cons

Your students will need to access

4 OPEN SOURCE RECORDING

The first

4.1 Required Hardware and Equipment

4.2 Additional Equipment

4.3 Concerns

- Your hardware must be good
- Student questions can't be heard by your mic.

4.4

5 EDITING

6 HOSTING

6.1 YouTube

6.1.1 Positive Considerations. Google is now in charge of making sure your stuff is accessable.

6.1.2 Negative Considerations. It's Youtube

6.1.3 Vimeo.

6.1.4 Positive Considerations. Professional

6.1.5 Negative Considerations. Pay for hosting

6.1.6 Drive.

6.1.7 Negative Considerations. You may have to pay for hosting

7 RECAP

8 A NOTE ON LICENSES